ORPHAN WORKS

Orphan Works are letters/poems/emails/artistic compositions and any other creative works which are “in copyright” but where the rights holders are unknown or cannot be traced. There are over 50 million Orphan Works across the public sector with new Orphan Works being created every day. The British Library estimates that 40% of all works created are Orphan Works and up to 50% of collection works can be Orphans.

IF A WORK IS AN ORPHAN WORK, CAN I USE IT ANYWAY?

No, this is an infringement of copyright. However you can mitigate your risks if you first make efforts to trace rights holders and document your efforts. This is called ‘due diligence’.

CAN I USE THE WORK AFTER I’VE CARRIED OUT THE DUE DILIGENCE FOR THAT WORK?

If you can’t trace rights holders, your organisation still needs to decide about its appetite for risk before it uses the work. If the work is then used, consider a risk managed approach together with further risk mitigating strategies. These could be an appropriately worded copyright statement as well as ‘notice and take down’ procedures so that if the rights holders come forward, you can remove the work from your website.

HOW CAN I PREVENT CREATING ORPHAN WORKS IN THE FUTURE?

› Request permission from rights holders to use works when they are acquired by your organisation;
› Document information about rights holders
› Credit rights holders and embed ownership and contact information in metadata about the work.

WHERE CAN I FIND OUT MORE?

Strategic Content Alliance IPR and Licensing Toolkit
For general advice and guidance contact JISC Legal www.jisclegal.ac.uk

DISCLAIMER STATEMENT

Whilst we hope you find this poster useful and informative, the contents are for general advice and best practice purposes only and do not constitute legal advice. Although we believe the contents are up to date and accurate as well as a true representation of best practice advice for public sector bodies, we can give no assurances, warranty or indemnity regarding the accuracy, currency or applicability of any of the contents in relation to specific situations and particular circumstances. In such circumstances, appropriate professional legal advice should always be sought.

©HEFCE 2011. The contents of this poster, apart from any logos and images which are displayed, have been licensed for use under a Creative Commons Attribution-Non-Commercial Share Alike Licence.